

Indus fish signs and it's varied manifestations

In this article we concentrate on just the fish signs and it's manifestations alone. One of the early interpretation of fish sign as “mīn” was by Father Heras in 1930s [1]. This was reiterated with caution by Iravadham Mahadevan [2]. If we look at the frequency of the consonants in Tamil (both modern and old), the one that comes on top is “ka” and not “ma” or “mi”. We know that the fish sign is the most frequent in Indus script, so the obvious Turing's not so enigmatic result is that the fish sign must start with “ka” and we found “kanni” is probably more feasible. However, our result “kanni” is independent of it and was inspired by M.V.Bhaskar's interpretation (personal communication) that the “Garial” (the river crocodile) is synonymous with fish and was probably trained and used as a boat. My own personal exposure to local customs also revealed that “kanni” is a term used commonly in earlier times for boat or any vehicle. The analogy could be that “kanni” referring to a women carrying children or it could be that the boat itself was driven by women in those days. However, this anlogy is not without it's difficulty. The word “kaṇṇi” refered in modern Tamil to be a maiden is without any support in DED [3]. The only support comes the word “kaṇi” according to DED 1408 is “tender”, “love”, “devotion” etc., and so is “kātal” DED 1445 - “love”, “affection”, “lust” etc. From not so mystical angle it could be just derived from “kaṇ” DED 1159 “eye”, “peacock's tail”, probably leading to a mystical euphemism of “Da Vinci Code”. Support from another quarter is “traveling places” come from DED 1443 “kāṇ” – “to see”, DED 1161 “kaṇ” – “place”, DED 1166 “kaṇai” - “arrow”, and DED 1109 “kaṭa” - “to move”. The interpretation that it is “kaṇṇi” is reinforced by other evidences like sign-63 “kaṇṇi-pori”, where it is meant as a “snare” DED 1183+4538.

Assuming that sign-59  is “kaṇṇi”, it could mean any of these things: vehicle, boat, cart, trap, trapper, soft, tender etc. We will show lines of text that seem to provide such evidences, but before that we decide a few variants of fish sign and phrases:
